ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Methods of using a topical composition comprising a storage-stable mixture of a benzoyl peroxide dispersion and clindamycin or pharmaceutically acceptable salts or esters thereof for treating rosacea. These methods also contemplate the reduction or elimination of Demodex folliculorum organisms from affected skin areas, thereby reducing clinical signs of rosacea potentially due to allergic and vasomotor responses of the body to the organism in susceptible persons.